Introduction

“Life is to explore, to discover, to delight and to be delighted.”

-Nicole Schapiro

It is 2:30 in the morning. Most of your friends are offline. You have given up the idea of ever falling asleep as you stare out the window, wondering how to make the most out of your life. You fear the comfort of your bed; not because you dread the possibility of having a nightmare, not because you hate drifting into slumber, but because you are frightened of tomorrow.

You are just that scared to wake up.

You are afraid to wake up to expectations which you are bound to convert into disappointments, anyway. You are afraid to open your eyes feeling so little and so worthless all over again. You are afraid to wake up being the same broke, unproductive loser that you think you are.

Then, left with so much vulnerability and anxiety, you ended up stalking your ex; after avoiding the idea for so long. It has been years! Now you can only wonder what have changed. Once, you both shared the same dream, vowing you'd reach it together. Once, you had some sense of worth.

Upon stumbling on the profile picture, you felt your heart skip a beat. Not because you saw your ex being more captivating than ever, but because right behind the person who used to be your dream, was yet another dream. Your dream place! A photograph of that country is even hanging on the wall of your room at the very moment!

But what has changed? How did that person get there? How could that person live in your fantasy, while all this time, you have been dwelling on melancholy? How could life be so unfair?

As you opened that profile, what you saw made you even more confused:

Your ex, now earning a fortune and living your dream life, works as a freelancer. Was that the secret? That's it? Was that all? But what could that possibly mean? For sure something happened along the way. Is there actually a sure route to success and to a sense of accomplishment?

At first it was your curiosity that introduced you to the idea of making money online. Then later, it became some sort of a challenge to test yourself if you could actually do it. Until the simple challenge became the solution to your problem. Suddenly, it was no longer about your ex at all; it was about finding yourself again. It was dreaming all over again.

Then before knowing it, you didn't have to prove your worth anymore. You felt it. You believed it. You lived it.

It all started when you began earning a hundred dollar a day.

Eventually, you were not just looking at your dream place from someone's profile picture or from a photograph hanging on your room. You are staring at it while holding the key to your new home.

You became the person who used to be the subject of your envy every time you stare out of your window every 2:30 a.m. You became the kind of person you once thought you will never, ever be.

Sounds too dreamy? Well pull up a chair and all eyes here because we are about to start making it real.

All set? Good. Now think about the last time you ever failed on something. It could be a relationship, school, a task, money— anything. Dwell upon the agony of failure— of the potential for success that did not come to life. Extract old wounds and let them bleed again.

I bet it's dripping, already.

Remember how it made you feel like you will never be good enough? That no matter what you do, you are just not going to make things right? That you just don't have it in you?

What if today is the day you work to claim what you deserve from life?

Before we proceed, I want you look at your palm and close it so hard into a fist that the veins of the back of your hand would pop. Now, imagine a hundred fireflies coming out of those veins. Could you do it? I want you to shut your eyes so hard, imagine you're staring at very own brand-new car, then open your eyes and look at that same car with you on the driver's seat. Could you do it? Lastly, I want you to whisper your name seven times and think about it coming out from the mouth of a genie. Could you do it?

If you were able to do at least one of the three, then congratulations! You have just successfully completed a task. And those were not just simple activities! They were tasks that required an open mind and creativity. You allowed your mind to work because you feel like you could, and you did. You directed your brain into something it did not initially plan, and you commanded it to put your senses to work.

But what could that possibly do with making a hundred dollar a day, online?

Honey, has anybody ever told you that every journey starts with the first step? Tell you what, all of those folks who ever told you that piece of cliché of were lying! If you do step one right away, how would you know where you are going? You'd end up tripping, wandering and lost— like you always were... before today.

No, a good journey doesn't start with the first step. Remember this: every action should start with an intention. When you put your imagination at work a while ago, you already proved to yourself that you can redirect your thoughts into an exploration. You can think. You can intend. You can pretend. And that's step zero— one of the most important parts of making a hundred dollar every single day. Acknowledge your own creativity and resourcefulness, and do not dwell on all the reasons why it could be impossible. Look ahead. Stop sulking and get your mind to work.

I'm not talking about that troubled mind that had it rough through all the failures, but the mind of the child that once said:

“When I grow up, I want to be successful.”

To achieve your goal, you will need that child with you. Don't ever let that brat go. Because I am sure that the last time you did so was the same time you failed. No matter what, I want you to look at the eyes of that child. He (or she) is counting on you to make it happen. When you think no one else will put their trust in your cleverness and grit, that child always will.

Yes, you may have failed several times before this, but just the mere fact that you can tell your mind to put your eyes, your mouth and your hand into motion a while ago, already proves that you can be ready to make use of your creativity and teach your mind to get things done.

Imagine a work life where you make your own rules, you set your own pace, you choose the place, and you earn a hundred dollar a day... or even more. But that will not happen without the carefree little kid that you were, and the responsible adult that you are teaming up to make the biggest change in your life thus far. Both of you deserve that gift that awaits you. Hold hands and grab it together.

Are you up for the challenge?

Think about it.

Chapter 1

Getting Started: Online Jobs that could Change Your Life!

“Life is a grindstone. Whether it grinds us down or polishes us up depends on us.”

—L. Thomas Holdcroft

Now, here's the real step one:

get familiar with what you will be dealing with. The internet has been around since the 60's, when it was used as a tool for governments to have an exchange of necessary information. However, it wasn't until the 80's when it was actually made available for public use. Less than a decade later, the internet started giving birth to a surge of websites as there came a sudden necessity to turn things around and embrace the modern age. Since then, change has been extremely constant as it became both a challenge and a blessing for people who are looking for innovative ways to generate income.

That is where you step in.

It would really help if you could update yourself with the current trends of the online world. Like what are the effective strategies in 2020 that has never existed back in the early 2000's; or what worked then that is not applicable in today's online society, as well as the timeless skills that you have always known which you can apply when you decide to generate income through the internet.

There are a lot of ways to learn and you should never dare to stop yourself just because you think you've reached your limit. The more you know, the more realize you still have a lot to know. When you decide to work for yourself, to be your own boss, you should also constantly be reminded that as you earn and grab all that income on your own, you will also be equally responsible in getting things done alone.

Part of the things that you will have to remember while being familiar in monetizing your skills in the online world, is that opportunities are endless. Every single skill that you have can be converted into cash, and most of the time, you will need little to zero investment to get started, save for a bit of hard work and confidence. That's why you need to work with that carefree child while thinking like a real adult.

But where exactly do you start?

And how can you get your first hundred dollars, which will eventually be your daily income?

First, ask yourself: What are your skills? What are you good at? None? It's absolutely fine. You can start by being the generalist virtual assistant and along the way discover your own strengths and areas of specialization. Are you good at making art? You can try graphic design. Do you have a passion for writing? Then there is something huge waiting for you because the online world is in constant need of writers. And the list will go on from something as simple as typing someone's handwritten work to something as complex as programming and copywriting.

It's all out there, patiently waiting for you to discover as you tap on your skills and maximize them for your benefit.

Still don't know where to begin? Well here is a list of some online jobs for you to check out and gather your first 100 dollars from:

1 Freelance Writing

There are tons of things to write about in the internet. The scope of which is so broad that you can literally write about anything and get paid for it. All you will need to start is a list of the things that you know, or have experience about. You can do this by making bullet points about all of your skills and everything that you learned from pre-school up to this point.

Simple.

And then, select your niche or your area of specialty a.k.a your favorite topic. This niche will help you find clients, and most importantly, it will help clients find you.

Of course, like any other path to success, you don't become a master freelance writer overnight. However, if you can already imagine yourself earning more than a hundred dollar a day simply by writing on a topic that you love, then there is nothing to lose in giving it a go! Attend online courses, read freelance writing ebooks (a lot of them are free of charge), watch YouTube tutorials, slowly build your own portfolio of writing experiences, and before you know it, you're having your own clients who pay you for doing something you enjoy.

According to ziprecruiter.com, an established freelance writer gets paid from around $2167 to $5268 a month. That's approximately $150 a day! Some go for an hour rate charging at an average of $30/hour, and other's get paid a dollar per word! PER WORD! Imagine writing a 500-word document and getting paid $500 for it! No sweat!

Isn't this what you want?

2 Virtual Assistance

Virtual assistants are also known as the generalists of the online world. Perhaps, it is safe to say that when you become a virtual assistant, you turn into a Jack of All Trades, Master of None... yet. What do you think does that mean?

Yes, exactly what its name entails. Virtual Assistants work for clients who will be needing administrative services. We all know that there are a lot of different companies out there and they all have various needs and requirements. You may be tasked to answer emails, to set up the calendar of the client, to manage social media posts, etc. But just as you are needed to do different jobs, you are also not required to be an actual expert in any of them.

Awesome, isn't it? You get to try out doing a lot of things while you discover where you could be really good at.

Most clients may look for a virtual assistant with experience, but here's the deal: there are ways to earn that experience without getting a prior job. All you need are things you probably don't realize you already have; things like cleverness and resourcefulness.

Watch tutorials, do relevant activities, join free or paid online courses on virtual assistance, attend webinars and whatever you learn in any of those platforms, as long as you can document them and compile them in an online portfolio, can be counted as an experience.

For example, you attended an online course for freelancing. In that course, you got to try out an activity that would test a certain skill included in the arrays of things a virtual assistant could be tasked to do. That very activity and whatever you learned from it can already be counted as your experience.

See?

It is all a matter of persistence and perseverance. And it is definitely something you are capable of!

According to ZipRecruiter, one of the biggest recruiting company in the United States, virtual assistants can get paid from $6.97 up to $59.86 per hour! Not bad for someone who is trying to find his way around the freelancing world. Also, you get paid while being trained with a lot of basics that could lead you to your actual field of expertise!

Isn't this what you want?

Graphic Designing

Graphic designing is a visual communication of ideas. If you are interested in making profit online out of your love for art and creativity, this may be the best for you. Like any other skill, it doesn't matter if you do not have any idea about graphic as you start. Some self-taught graphic designers who did not even get to spend any amount for an online course are now earning a six to seven figures by using the skills they got to learn on their own.

Here are some of the most common types of GRAPHIC DESIGN that you may want to check out and learn:

UX design- also known as User Experience design, puts emphasis to making mobile applications and websites user-friendly, pleasant and adoptable*

Web design- focuses on making websites more appealing and interactive. Designers play with the color scheme, layout and navigation pane of the website to ensure that it is presented in the best possible way.*

Motion Graphics Design- remember your most favorite fantasy show as a child? The ones responsible for the special effects and other visual elements are graphic designers. Motion Graphic designers are also one of the most important people to make your famous animated movies possible.*

True enough, you will have a lot to learn the moment you decide to become a graphic designer. But so is the case with any other job. If you need any motivation to start hitting those tutorials, looking for those guides, meeting people and perhaps joining classes, then kindly take note that according to ZipRecruiter, that the average rate for Graphic Designers is $48,283 per year! THAT'S AROUND 132 BUCKS A DAY! Rates may vary for every country of course, but it is definitely not unlikely that you have in you the potential to earn just as much... and so much more!

4 Affiliate Marketing

For a lot of people, affiliate marketing is their first step towards a seven-figure dream. In layman's term, it is simply about online advertising and promotion. The concept behind affiliate marketing is that a person either hires a third party to promote their products or services, or a person promotes a certain product and earns a commission in the profit of the products that are sold. Someone— an affiliate— is given a share in the revenue generated after promoting a product or a service.

Affiliate marketing is anchored upon income-sharing. Whether you are planning to be the seller (also known as the merchant), or a publisher (an affiliate), affiliate marketing is definitely something you can benefit from. It is one of the major strategies for businesses to flourish. The merchant can make money by having more people recognize and try out their products, and the affiliate gets passive income for promoting the products.

If you are planning to be an affiliate, one major thing that can help you thrive is by owning a website, as is the case in a lot of other online freelancing work. You can use this website to promote products that are (preferably) already popular and familiar.

But why is that so?

It is better to start your affiliate marketing gigs with products or services that are already familiar to people. If you do so, you wouldn't have to start from scratch with all the promotion. You can also easily make use of good reviews from previous clients.

“Ok, I get it. But how do I even start if I don’t have the money?”

If you are planning to be a merchant, then money could really be a major factor to start. But if you are planning to be an affiliate, it’s a simple two-step process that won’t require to pay anything except for the little investment you may need for the website!

Here’s how it works:

- Sign up on an affiliate program for your chosen person, brand or company.
- Start building your website where all the promotion could be done, and attach it to your chosen company’s web page.

And that’s it! You don’t have to invest with money and share in the burden of losses and crises. All you will need is your time, effort and some killer marketing strategy!

According to affise.com, even a low level affiliate can earn up to $300 a day! Well, if you try harder and struggle to the best of your ability with patience and persistence, you’d be laughing at that amount in no time!

On the other hand, super affiliates (also known as the “gurus of affiliate marketing”) can make up to $10000 a day, and even more!

Marketers need to be promoted just as much as you need a job. Find the perfect brand for your own interest, a company that you can trust, and it will pave the way to your first hundred dollars, and to whatever awaits you if you do your best.

5 Online Coaching

For a lot of people, affiliate marketing is their first step towards a seven-figure dream. In layman's term, it is simply about online advertising and promotion. The concept behind affiliate marketing is that a person either hires a third party to promote their products or services,

As you got a little bit older, perhaps you have started rolling your eyes at the idea because “Bla bla bla I need to love myself first.” Yet at this point, with all the pandemic and global crisis going on, you have probably revisited the idea in your subconscious and natural human empathy is telling you that you can always love yourself while giving unconditional love and compassion to your fellowmen.

Oh. How cute.

But if that is what you passionately believe at the moment, then guess what, big stuffs are waiting for you!

Because it has always been true. It is always better to give than to receive. Or better yet, the more you give, the more you receive.

Especially in the online world

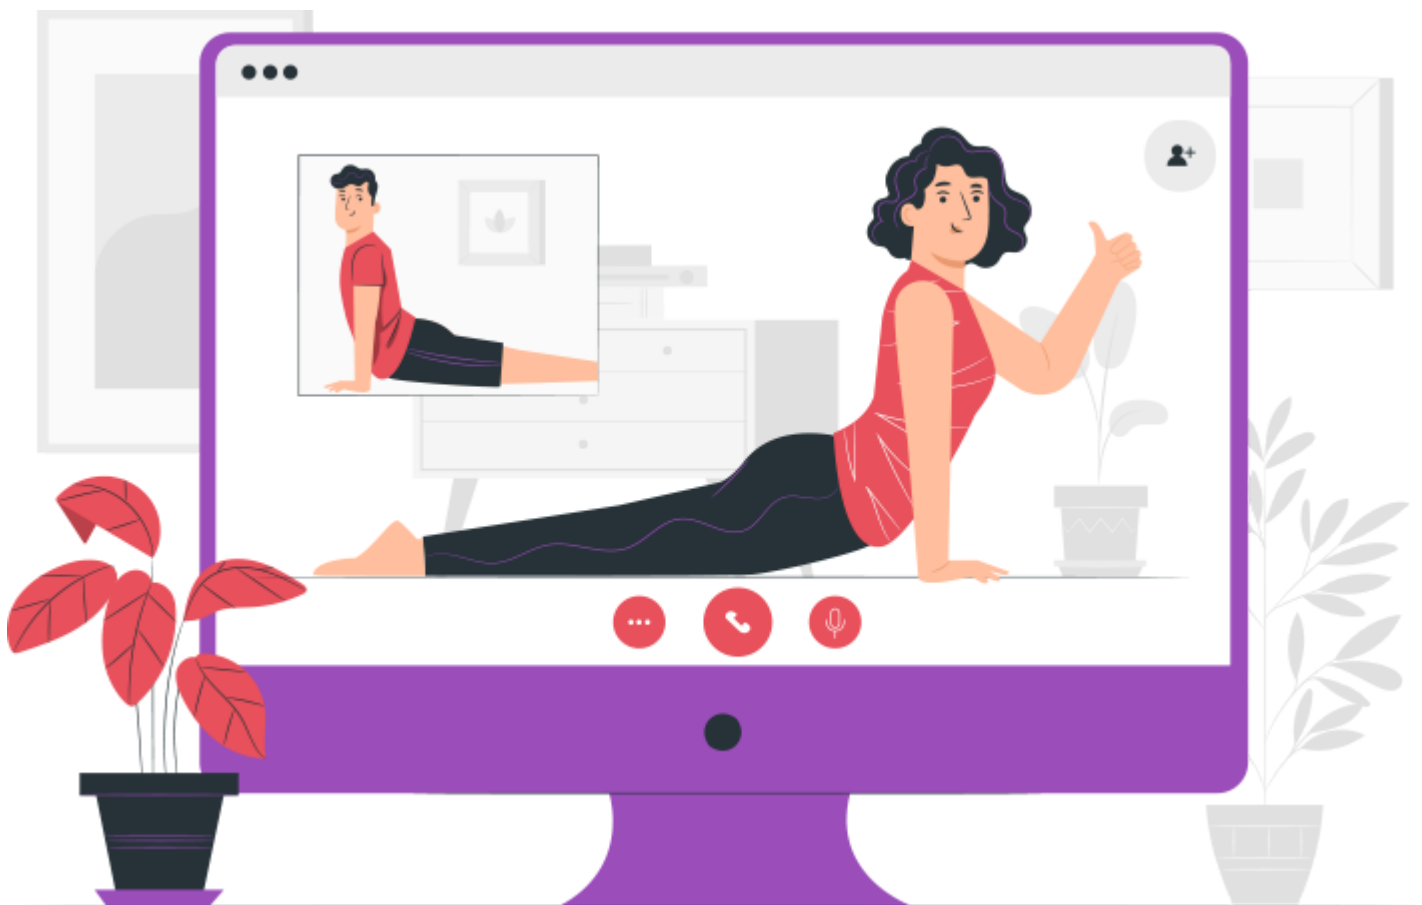

No, it has nothing to do with being manipulative and showing kindness simply because we need some quick money in return. It's about the very philosophy of being truly generous both to your fellowmen and also to yourself. Imagine, you can actually earn money out of your kindness!

How exactly could that happen, without being tainted by schemes and deceit?

The online world has an answer: Online Coaching.

“You’re bluffing. There are a lot of scams in the internet. There are scam tutors as well. Who are you kidding?”

Perhaps. But in the world of online coaching, you do not thrive if your intention is purely on making money. That is impossible. Eventually you will lose students. You will lose income. You will fail. Why? Because one of the biggest ways to be successful as an online coach is when you establish trust. Once that is broken, it will be impossible to proceed and experience the most beneficial and the most income-generating part of the job. Yes, you may earn a few dollar here and there, but this industry, only true quality coaches will thrive.

“Alright, I get it. But what is online coaching anyway?”

Online coaching happens when you monetize your skill by sharing your knowledge with others online while following structured and detailed modules. In other words, it is making use of your passion in helping people in a way that it would also help you.

It is also one of the fastest growing market these days. It is a market expanding instead of declining overtime. In the past four years alone, the market for online coaches has doubled! So just by being positioned as an online coach, you will automatically benefit from the growth.

According to ZipRecruiter, the average annual pay for online coaching is $57,534. That could get higher, depending on the course you teach, and the rate your clients can agree on!

“Okay, Now we’re talking. But what are the things that I need to consider before making my decision?”

To make it easy and to give some sort of it an uplifting-tweet vibe, I will narrow down to the acronym “YAS!”

Y- Yourself. Make an assessment on the knowledge and set of skills that you want to share to others. Something that you feel so passionately about, and you want to inculcate in the minds of your potential students. Then hone that skill and make an actual, feasible plan.

A-Audience. What kind of people would you want as your students? Or who do you think will benefit the most from your classes and what common problem do you think they have?

S-Situation and Solution. Learn about these problem and try to make a concrete and detailed structure for how the class is going to flow. Don’t stop learning and try as much as you can to give your best advice to your students. After all as I have said, you only truly thrive if you truly care.

Chapter 2

Apps and Websites that will Pay You

“Your life is not a problem to be solved but a gift to be opened.”

— Wayne Muller

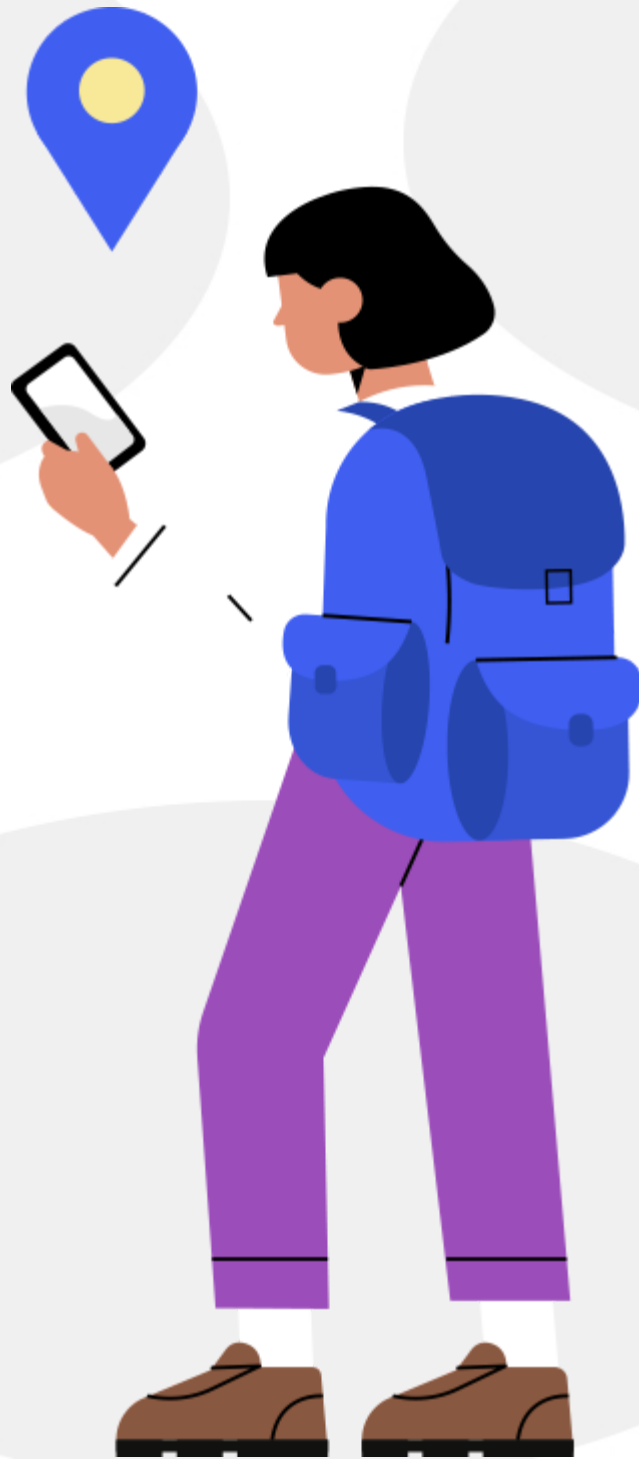

So, you still can't decide where to start? It's fine. Big decisions take time, especially life-changing ones. The most important thing is that the moment you decide, you decide for real. No turning backs simply because you think you cannot make it. No giving in to insecurities. No more self-deprecating thoughts.

The world ahead will not accept excuses related to your past. It needs you to act today so it can offer you what you deserve for tomorrow. Bring that child that once dreamed into the top of a mountain, and allow the both of your eyes to revel upon the immensity of the world.

Then be ready for the second step— explore.

There are a lot of other ways to earn extra money online other than those mentioned above. Those may have a lot to do with stable income, but you want to earn while you are still at the process of learning those skills, or if you want to earn more money even if you are already doing the online job that's best for you, there are some websites that will pay you just by doing the normal things would you do every single day.

Sounds impossible? You may want to check these out:

- Sweatcoin- Do you love taking early morning jogs? Well tell you what, an app called sweatcoin pays you just by walking! Not only will you earn additional income to reach a hundred dollar a day, but you will also be fit to do more work and be ready to take on more profitable tasks!

- Inboxdollars- If you spend most of your time streaming videos and binge watching your favorite TV shows, you may feel guilty afterwards, thinking that you have wasted more time than you can afford. But with this cool website, you can get paid just by doing these seemingly unproductive activities! Not only that, inboxdollars will give you $5 simply by signing up!

- Swagbucks- Just like Inboxdollars, Swagbucks will pay you $5 once you sign up. They will also pay you for answering quick surveys, watching videos, playing games, shopping and even donating to charity! What's even great is that Swagbucks has paid its customers over $250,000,000! There is no underlying scam and it remains true to its promise. What more could we ask for?

It's like the Holy Grail for earning money without effort!

- SlideJoy- You will not have to do anything in this app but use it as your lock screen and get your reward. Those rewards may come as cash payed via Paypal, or through gift cards.
- Field Agent- This fun tool will pay you for doing various tasks within your area, like simply going to the grocery store and taking a picture of goods! Isn't it fun?
- UserTesting.com- This one can pay you up to $60 per hour simply by testing out apps and websites. There are a lot of multimillion dollar companies who will be in need of feedback as aiming for a more user-friendly set up and eventually generate more profit. Because of this, they are willing to pay you as much as $60 simply by speaking about your thoughts and experience with their website.

Chapter 3

Personal Qualities that will Help
You Make It BIG

“Life is a train of moods like a string of beads; and as we pass through them they prove to be many colored lenses, which paint their own hue, and each shows us only what lies in its own focus.”

—Ralph Waldo Emerson

With every tick of our clocks, we become a different person. Every second, there is a new version of us coming out. Every second, we give birth to a person who was never there before. That is the reason why we may tend to post something online, only to delete it a minute later. That is the reason why we timidly apologize not long after our worst outburst. That is also the reason why we regret some of the decisions we have made in the past. Because that is just not who we are anymore.

And so to think that you are incapable of the success you are seeing from people you admire; to believe that you can never turn out to be like that one teacher who used to impart some of the best lessons you have heard from life; to look at the dark, cloudy sky with eyes that are so sure your own storms will never come to an end, is an insult to your very soul.

There are a lot of people residing inside of you. And a lot more are still waiting to be born. But your versions who will lead you to success (other than that kid who dreams) are hiding among the sea of your personalities. They deserve to stand out. You deserve to know who they are so they can dominate your system right exactly when you need them.

But your versions who will lead you to success (other than that kid who dreams) are hiding among the sea of your personalities. They deserve to stand out. You deserve to know who they are so they can dominate your system right exactly when you need them.

So for the last step, it's time to meet your success buddies! Let us recognize who they are, pick them out, and let them shine!

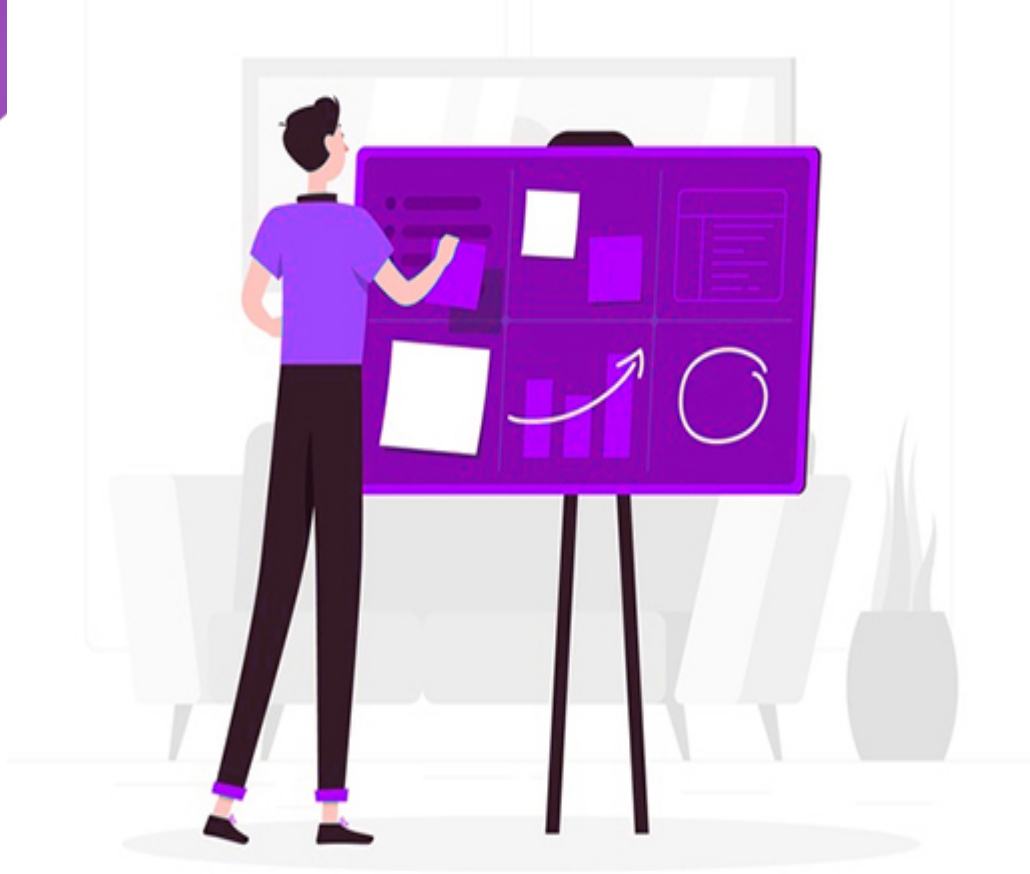

A. The Adaptable- This is the version of you who washes the dishes at home while wearing that big old sweatpants, and then goes out an hour later, trying to dress your best while spraying on your favorite perfume. And then not long after that, the same person would act like a complete hyperactive weirdo around your friends, only to stare out the window of a bus completely spaced out on his way home.

Believe it or not, that is a skill! To put on different faces on different situations. To know that you can't be the same person at home and on the workplace. If you will be aiming to earn a hundred dollars a day, you may want to call out that version every time one client acts like a brat, and another acts like a know-it-all.

Hone that version, and you will get to deal with all those people you have to interact with... like a pro!

B. The Resilient- Remember that game you used to play in the pool or at the sea with your family or friends? You all dive together, and the last one to come out, wins! Remember how you tried to hold your breath no matter how tempted you are to come out first? I have to win this, you said. Or at least, I must never be dishonored by these self-serving emperors! That determination, that willpower, YOU NEED THAT! Call out Mr. Resilient whenever things get really tough and nothing seems to go out as planned. And take the problem as one of those opponents you had whom you wanted to take down no matter what!

C. The Persistent- Some time before this, you have probably asked your mom permission to go and hang out. In all those moments, there was definitely a time when she was not on her best mood, right? Then as anticipated, she shook her head in disapproval.

But you had to go! Your friends were waiting. So, you asked for the second time. It was still a no. Yet, instead of sulking in a corner, you looked out the window, and instructed your pals to wait some more. Then you cleaned your mom's room and hugged her so tight. Mom, do you know that I love you? She laughed. She knew you were just being the manipulative brat that you are, but she appreciated how you never threw a tantrum and worked to improve her mood, instead.

In this new game you are about to play, treat that hundred-dollar bill like that approval you badly wanted to have from mom. We have to want to earn so bad that you would go to certain extremes while displaying your best attitude along the way.

Then it will help even more if you think of your mom's smile as an inspiration!

Those three buddies may be some of your best allies in your goal of making a hundred dollar every day, but they are not all. Somewhere in the crowd hides Mr. Humble, with a kind of confidence that doesn't involve arrogance. And then there is Mr. Versatile, who rarely says no to the challenges that will hone his character. There is also Mr. Tactful, with grace and elegance that would charm a lot of potential clients, amidst all the others.

All you have to do is look back at all those versions of you before this day and try to remember the best traits that you have displayed. Whether its intentional or

*Kindly send them

Conclusion

“I could not, at any age, be content to take my place by the fireside and simply look on. Life was meant to be lived. Curiosity must be kept alive. One must never, for whatever reason, turn his back on life.”

—Eleanor Roosevelt

It is 5:30 in the morning. Most of your friends are online. You have given up the idea of ever falling asleep as you stare out the window, remembering when you started making the most out of your life. You are just too excited and so happy to fall asleep.

You don't fear your bed anymore, you look forward to mornings, and your favorite part of the day is when you get to see the sunrise meeting you from the horizon, sending its salutations and congratulations, and urging you to keep on having hope.

How relieved you are that you have never given up on hope!

You have discovered that the secret to a life of fulfilment and purpose is not really about the hundred dollars you started to gain every single day. But the moment you got so eager to earn it, was the same moment you started to have goals again. And the value of all that you have learned along the way can no long be surpassed even by the highest possible income you could get.

And then you tried to check on that kid and realized he was still there, firmly rooted by your side. Perhaps he will stay there forever.

The biggest part of your success was that you never allowed your inner child to just vanish and die. Another big part was that you allowed yourself to grow to an extent that every day was an opportunity to learn; to manipulate a problem and lure it to direction you want it to go. You learned a lot of cleverness and confidence as you kept going.

As you wake up from this trance, I want you to once again, look at your palm and close it so hard into a fist that the veins of the back of your hand would pop. Clench that fist so hard.

That is Mr. Resilient, if you can remember him. He is telling you that he will push it to the extent of his ability and even go beyond it. He tells you that this life is not owned by any other person. It is yours. Yours to lead. Yours to take responsibility. Yours to bring into the future you deserve.

Your first hundred dollars online is just hiding behind a nearby rock along this path that you took. Whether you find it or not is now up to you.

Thank You!
